the state is often regarded as an abstract and neutral bureaucratic entity against this common sense idea at the heart of the state argues that it is also a concrete reality with a morality embodied in the work of its agents and inscribed in the issues of its time a political and moral anthropology this book is the result of a five year investigation conducted by ten scholars based in france it analyses amongst other topics the police the court system the prison apparatus the social services and mental health facilities combining genealogy and ethnography its authors show that these state institutions do not simply implement laws rules and procedures they mobilise values and affects judgements and emotions in other words they reflect the morality of the state this book explores some of the political and methodological directions that collectively lead to the repositioning of islam in social science research as both an epistemic ontological category and as a method chapters by experts in the field explore research in the islamic context vis à vis these two distinct yet somehow interrelated frames the question being raised here is how islam as socio religious notion is related to islam as a theoretical methodological framework taking cues from the experience of contributors this book also examines the question if current methodologies or frames of references are pluralized enough to accommodate the question of muslims or could the scholars themselves create alternative directions around the dominant spaces the book offers ethnographic studies of muslim communities mostly in minority settings and engages with a number of issues researchers encounter when dealing with the lived or everyday islam this book is essential reading for anyone engaged in the study of muslims in the contemporary world it will appeal to scholars of religious studies studies of islam in the west anthropology sociology cultural studies human geography and research methods whether spurred by religious images or academic history books hardly a day goes by in south asia without an incident or court case occurring as a result of hurt religious feelings the sharp rise in blasphemy accusations over the past few decades calls for an investigation into why offence politics has become so pronounced and why it is observable across religious and political differences outrage offers an interdisciplinary study of this growing trend bringing together researchers in anthropology religious studies languages south asia studies and history all with rich experience in the variegated ways in which religion and politics intersect in this region the volume presents a fine grained analysis that navigates and unpacks the religious sensitivities and political concerns under discussion each chapter focuses on a recent case or context of alleged blasphemy or desecration in india pakistan bangladesh and myanmar collectively exploring common denominators across national and religious differences among the common features are the rapid introduction of social media and smartphones the possible political gains of initiating blasphemy accusations and the growing self assertion of marginal communities these features are turning south asia into a veritable flash point for offence controversies in the world today and will be of interest to researchers exploring the intersection of religion and politics in south asia and beyond if politics is a serious matter and humour a funny one this volume investigates how and why the boundaries between the two are blurred politics can be represented in a humorous manner and humour can have a serious intent political humour conveys criticism against the political status quo and or recycles and reinforces dominant views on politics the data analysed comes from european states with different sociopolitical histories and traditions and the methodologies adopted originate in different fields discourse analysis folklore and cultural studies media studies sociolinguistics sociology theatre semiotics the first part of the volume is dedicated to politicians humour as a means of public positioning deliberation and eventually attack against political adversaries while the second one involves political satire as realised in different genres animation impersonation and cartoons last but not least the third part shows how political humour can be manipulated in public debates or become an integral part of postmodern art german turkish relations which have a long history and generally unrecognized depth have rarely been examined as mutually formative processes isolated instances of influence have been examined in detail but the historical and still ongoing processes of mutual interaction have rarely been seriously considered the ruling assumption has been that germany may have an impact on turkey but not the other way around religion identity and politics examines this mutual interaction specifically with regard to religious identities and institutions it opposes the commonly held assumption that europe is the abode of secularism and enlightenment while the lands of islam are the realm of backwardness and fundamentalism both historically and contemporarily germany has treated religion as a core aspect of communal and civilizational identity and framed its institutions accordingly the book explores how there has been and continues to be a mutual exchange in this regard between germany and both the ottoman empire and modern turkey the authors show that the definition of identity and regulation of communities have been explicitly based on religion until the early and since the late twentieth century the period in between the age of secular nationalism which has always been treated as the norm now appears more clearly as an exception this book will be of interest to students and scholars of sociology politics history and religion where saints show respect reveals the penetration of mafia values in sicilian society instead of focusing on sensational criminality this study considers rituals through which local society learns deep respect sometimes fearful but often playful or pious for those values and their enforcers state and church misconstrue these values as vestiges of a society morally damned and left behind in a pagan past this study draws on three decades of ethnographic research to explore a strikingly different sicily from the self congratulatory version of government and religious leaders where a seemingly obscure set of rural practices offers a critical perspective on modernity itself
